TEXT ASOUTH AFRICA EXPLODES ONTO THE GLOBAL MUSIC SCENE

- 1 The global music industry reached an all-time high in total revenue in 2023. There was an increase in every region and across almost every recorded music genre. The increase was driven by a massive growth in streaming, which refers to listening to music directly from the internet. This was the ninth consecutive growth in profits and it painted a picture of a truly global and diverse music industry. 5
- 2 Sub-Saharan Africa is the fastest growing music market in the world with South Africa remaining the biggest music consumer in Africa. According to the International Federation of the Phonographic¹ Industry (IFPI), South Africa remains the largest market in the region, contributing 77% to the regional earnings. The surge in interest in South African music has surpassed the previous years' levels. 10
- 3 This comes after the young South African artist, Tyla, won the first Grammy – a United States music award – for Best African Music Performance for her hit single, Water. This is a rhythm and blues (R&B) track with a touch of Amapiano which is a South African music genre. She was not the first South African artist to receive a Grammy award, however, her winning underlined the global impact of music emerging from Africa. In 2023, Wouter Kellerman, Zakes Bantwini and Nomcebo Zikode won a Grammy for Best Global Music Performance. In 2022, the South African artist, Black Coffee, was awarded the Grammy for Best Dance/Electronic Album. Tyla's Grammy is the 11th to be won by a South African artist. 15 20
- 4 Tyla's song, 'Water', was listened to 500 million times on Spotify, an audio streaming and media service. However, according to the streaming service, she was already making waves before that. Her top streams on Spotify before the release of 'Water' came from Nairobi, Lagos, Johannesburg and Cape Town. The international cities that have become most active in streaming her music are Sydney, Melbourne, Amsterdam and Jakarta. 'Water' led to a 30 000% increase in her average daily streams, and her tracks have been added to 10 million Spotify playlists. 25
- 5 The international president of Warner Music, Simon Robson, says what is exciting about Africa is that the music seems to be something that rises above national and global barriers. As a result, African artists are gaining international recognition. Although the African music market is still developing, it has grown tremendously. A global audience could soon be enjoying this music. Christel Kayibi, director at Sony Music Africa, says a rich blend of genres and cultures is the driving force of the growth and creativity in the region's music scene. She says she always wanted African music to take its rightful place on the global stage. 30 35

6	Amapiano is becoming well-established on the global stage, but there are other artists and genres that are ready to step into the spotlight. There is a need to ensure that artist development and building of sustainable careers remain important to every record company. These companies now have deliberate strategies to engage with artists and drive developments in the sub-Saharan region by establishing partnerships.	40
7	Cat Kreidich, president of Alternative Distribution Alliance (ADA) Worldwide, says independent artists now have opportunities in the international market. These artists do not need to have a hit song in the United States to spark global interest. In the modern music business, every region can easily see what is happening in other parts of the world through music streaming services. The distribution companies track down musical success stories from anywhere in the world and broadcast them using different platforms. Tyla's breakthrough underlines the extent to which streaming music has become critical to artistic success.	45 50
8	South African artists are among the international artists who are reaping the benefits of streaming services. The fact that four of the songs from Tyla's album are already widely listened to, confirms that she has immense talent. The modern music business is now truly global with South Africa adding its unique diversity as well.	55

SECTION B: SUMMARYQUESTION 2

Many Grade 12 learners find the idea of going to a tertiary institution daunting. However, there are steps that these learners should take to ensure that they are ready for their tertiary education.

Read TEXT C below and list SEVEN ways to prepare for tertiary education.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Your summary must be written in point form.
2. List your SEVEN points in full sentences, using no more than 70 words.
3. Number your sentences from 1 to 7.
4. Write only ONE point per sentence.
5. Use your OWN words as far as possible.
6. Indicate the total number of words you have used in brackets at the end of your summary.

TEXT CREMOVE THE STRESS FROM TERTIARY PREPARATIONS

Getting ready for college or university is an exciting yet challenging journey. To make sure you are all set, you must be fully prepared.

Once you have chosen your course, familiarise yourself with its requirements. Decide whether you will need financial aid. If you will be paying for your studies, settle the registration fees to confirm your admission. Should you require accommodation away from home, arrange for suitable student housing either on or off-campus. Research the options early, considering factors like proximity to campus, rent and safety.

Organise documents such as your admission letter, matric statement and any other forms required for enrolment. Keep digital and hard copies of all your important documents in case you ever need them. Make sure you have the necessary items, such as stationery and a laptop.

Find out about the services offered to students such as libraries, student organisations and social clubs. Having prior knowledge of these services will help you adjust when you get to campus. Define clear academic goals for your upcoming tertiary experience. Set targets for the marks you hope to achieve in each module.

Work on your time management skills because tertiary education involves a heavier workload and requires increased independence. It is not always easy to prioritise tasks and balance studies with social life.

With these preparations in place, you will be ready to start your tertiary education journey confidently, equipped with the required tools and your mind will be set to succeed academically and personally.

QUESTION 5: LANGUAGE AND EDITING SKILLS

- 5.1 Read the passage (TEXT F) below, which has some deliberate errors, and answer the set questions.

TEXT F

SOUTH AFRICAN NATIONAL PARKS WEEK
1	South African National Parks Week is an annual event that offers free excess to national parks. The event's aim is the promotion for conservation. Cultural heritage and biological diversity is equally important. The goal is to encourage people to take pride in their natural enviroment.	5
2	The event was first introduced in 2006. Due to its success, it has become a popular initiative. During parks week, all national parks in South Africa offer free entry to the community.
3	The purpose is to encourage people to visit national parks. As a result, national parks will be open to people who may not have been able to visit them otherwise.	10
4	Many adventurers visit national parks for a range of recreational activities, these include hiking, camping and game viewing. This attracts large numbers of people from all over the country, including students and pensioners.	15
5	'I am pleased to note the success of National Parks Week,' says Minister Barbara Creecy.
